

AMATEUR CIRCUS DAY

All In Readiness for the Big Show To-Morrow.

UNIQUE, ENTERTAINING

Needy Confederate Women's Home Will Reap Rich Reward from the Splendid Show to Be Given. Rehearsal Last Night.

The much talked of amateur circus comes off to-morrow. A good show and a big crowd are foregone conclusions. Those who saw the circus at the Auditorium have nothing but pleasant recollections, and it is safe to say that all who saw it then will see it to-morrow, and those who did not will want to go, too.

Everything is in readiness. The big Horse Show building looks like the interior of a circus tent, and with flags and bunting, peanuts and lemonade, bands, jolly clowns, trained animals, performances of all classes, including bareback riders, there will be nothing but fun for two and a half hours at each performance.

Many well known people will take part in the show, for the time throwing aside their dignity to crack the jokes of the clown and to dispense the red lemonade.

TWO MORE CLOWNS. In addition to the many names already mentioned, those of Mr. Harry Huber and Mr. Lee Lorraine were added to the list as clowns. Mr. Lorraine has just returned from a trip, and Mr. Huber, Councilman from Lee Ward, is preparing to sing the old circus song: "Chewing Gum to Feed the Monkeys."

The demand for reserved seats has been such that those having the circus in their charge have decided to place them on sale at Branch R. Allen's to-day. As the crowd promises to be great, it is advisable to secure tickets to-day and to-morrow morning down town, although a large number of agents will be on hand at the Horse Show building, so that little delay will be experienced at the door.

Boxes have been reserved for the ladies of the Home for Needy Confederate Women, for whose benefit the circus is given, and they, together with the ladies of the Board of Managers, will occupy them at the afternoon performance. The ladies of the board are the patronesses of the circus, and ask their friends to go to see the show and enjoy themselves.

PATRONESSES OF THE CIRCUS. Mrs. Montague is president of the board; Miss Ruby Hodder is vice-president, and Mrs. A. J. Pyle is secretary. These ladies will meet at the residence of Mrs. Pyle, No. 213 East Grace Street, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock sharp to attend the circus in a body.

Branch R. Allen has donated a large number of fans, which will be distributed free to the ladies.

Joseph W. Billey & Sons have donated carriages for the ladies of the Home for Needy Confederate Women, and to those who attend the circus at the afternoon performance.

Captain Frank W. Cunningham, the ring-master, will introduce an original idea in costume, and will prove, indeed, the Chesterfield of ring-masters.

A full rehearsal was held last night, with the band, the performers and the clowns, and all indications pointed to a most unique and entertaining affair.

The matinee will begin at 3 o'clock; the night performance at 8:15, and there will be a grand concert by the Blues Band half an hour before each performance.

Training Has Begun for the Coming Foot-Ball Campaign.

The Richmond reporter for the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Athletic Association has received word that training for the coming season's foot-ball campaign has begun.

Only light work is required of the applicants at present, as the foot-ball season has not yet arrived, but every applicant is expected to report promptly on the first day of September, when training will begin in earnest.

The Virginia Polytechnic Institute coaches for this season, Mr. C. A. Lueder, head coach, on the Cornell, and Mr. R. Brown, Dartmouth's end, have arrived at Blacksburg, and are getting everything into shape, so that the regular work may start promptly on the set time.

Captain Miles has written personal letters to all the applicants, notifying them that training will begin promptly on the first, and that each man must report at that time. Restrictions have been laid on all the men, such as morning and evening runs, work in the gymnasium, proper diet, regular hours, with regular use of the training table, is putting them in condition to stand the severe training later.

Among the men who are now in training at Virginia Polytechnic Institute are Captain Miles, Guard Willson, Centre Styles, Osterlind, Gray and others.

In speaking of the prospects for the coming season, Captain Miles said: "I am confident that our prospects for a strong and winning team are brighter than ever before."

"While we have many of our old men back with us, we also have some new men who will undoubtedly make the team. The men have kept good training during the summer, and those who have arrived are working hard and faithfully, and if we have such spirit and good material combined, we are sure of a successful season."

Sue for Alleged Loss of Electric Power by Wire Tapping.

The Passenger and Power Company appeared as plaintiff in the Law and Equity Court yesterday. The company sues Edward B. O'Connor and Lee Jones for $200 and $200, respectively, alleged to be due them by reason of the tapping of wires and the use of electrical power not registered by the meter.

Months ago in the Police Court some defendants were charged with tampering with electricity and were each fined $100. The company claims that the above amount is due them by comparison with bills before the wires were tapped and bills afterward.

The case will come up at the September term.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON

FOR AUGUST 30, 1903.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

SUBJECT: "David Spares Saul."—I Sam. xxvi, 5-12: 21-25.
GOLDEN TEXT: Love your enemies; do good to them which hate you.—Luke vi, 27.

By Rev. J. E. Gilbert, D. D., Secretary of American Society of Religious Education

CONTEXT.—The agreement between David and Jonathan, studied last week, was faithfully kept by the latter. Learning his father's evil designs concerning his friend, Jonathan went forth into the field and made them known by the appointed signals. Immediately David fled for safety. Proceeding to Nob, he obtained bread for refreshment and the good sword of Goliath, which had been laid up with the priest. Thus armed he first fled to Achish, king of the Philistines, who, fearing him, sent him away. Then, on the advice of Achish, he fled to the cave of Adullam, where many unfortunate men joined him. With these he advanced to Mizpeh and then took refuge in the forest of Simeon. Jonathan, who had been hiding with Saul, who at once determined upon his destruction. Pursued by the king, David was thereafter a fugitive, remaining but a little time in one place. While he was concealed in the wilderness of Ziph, Saul came with his three thousand men to capture him. To-day's lesson relates an interesting event in that connection.

APPROACH (verses 5 and 6).—On some occasions, David fled when he knew his enemy was near, deeming it most prudent to be at a respectful distance. But in this instance he determined upon the bold movement in the hope of winning the favor of the king, what to some would seem to be extremely perilous. He waited until night came when Saul's men had gone into camp and had fallen asleep, none of them apprehensive of any danger, perhaps unaware that the one they sought was near. The king and his great captain, Abner, leader of his forces, lay in the midst of the men, their weapons of war near at hand, ready for use at a moment's notice. The situation of his spies David called into his counsel Abimelech and Abishai, two trusty warriors, the first a Benjamite, the other a Gileadite, and asked for a volunteer to accompany him to the king's camp. He did not propose to seek him to go, and, as the king's men were unwilling to risk the peril, but unwilling to trust the expedition wholly to anyone without him, Abimelech offered himself. The king, however, refused, and the two set out together on their errand. Passing unobserved through the outer lines of sleeping warriors they stealthily pursued where the king lay. At the head of the mighty man (I Sam. xii:23) thrust in the ground stood his spear, which his own hand might yield in war. Around him were loyal men, ready at a moment's signal to do his bidding. God had sent night was supernatural, such as fell upon Abraham, (Gen. xv:12) so that no man knew that David the shepherd youth was in their midst. A moment the two men were upon the face of the sleeper, Abimelech saw in the circumstance a providence, he believed that God had designed this night in which David should be freed from his persecutor. "Let me smite him," he cried. With one word and a powerful arm, he promised that the deed should be done and Saul should die.

RESTRAINT (verses 7 and 8).—David would not permit Abimelech to execute his purpose. He had been so long pursued returned good for evil and stood in defense of one who might be justly slain. When he saw the king's sword, he was plainly stated in two parts. First, the deed would be one of enormous wickedness. Saul had been a persecutor, and he would be a murderer. By that act he would be guilty of blood. The deed was sealed. To kill him would have been murder and treason, both crimes punishable by death. (I Kings ii:35). How could either of these two escape guilt, the one for acting, the other for approving the act? The Lord might smite as he had slain other bad men, and it would be better to leave him in the hands of God. (Psalm cxxviii). Or, if he would come to die, no matter how or when, however long delayed the end of life would surely come, (Heb. ix:27) or he might die in the night, as he acted as a David's speech to Abimelech, but rather cast new light upon it. In coming down to the camp and to the sleeping form of the king, there was no purpose of blood, such as some men have cherished, but instead a hope of transforming a cruel enemy into a friend. This he attempted by a remarkable stratagem. Abimelech was directed to take the spear and the sword of water from Saul's hand, the one the weapon of defense, the other the emblem of refreshment, both needed on waking, would be quickly missed. Their removal was a sign to all that the owner had been slain. The removal of the sword would harm to others or to maintain his own comfort, and that that had been done while he slept, that there was no harm to him. Bearing the spear and the sword, the two men returned as they came. No one was wakened, and the deed was done. So softly and safely on they came with their trophies toward the little band of which they were a part. (I Sam. xvi:21).

CONFIDENCE (verses 13 to 20).—The portion of the narrative (verses 13 to 20), omitted from our study, shows what use David made of his venture to the camp. He awakened the sleeper, held up the captured spear and with a loud voice cried to Abimelech, "Awake, O king, for I have slain thee." He then David had opportunity to declare his righteousness and to plead for his life. He therefore fled to the cave of Adullam. The effect was what he intended. He was not only freed from the pursuit, but he was able to return to his home. The removal of the sword and the spear had no evil intention; that he was worthy of confidence. He acknowledged that he had erred in his attempt to do harm to his persecutor, and he sought to restore to one who had spared his life, this confession was an indication of returning to his former allegiance. It nevertheless showed that better side of the king's nature, which, as in the case of all men, asserted its power.

OPPORTUNITY.—(Verses 22 and 23). After these words of Saul, spoken in due repentance for the wrong and with a plea that ought to prevail even with a bad man, Saul's spirit was changed. He would have been an ungrateful wretch had he failed to discern the high character of the man who had sought to destroy him. The evil impulses were subdued, and he was left with a man whom he had so earnestly sought to destroy. The evil impulses were subdued, and he was left with a man whom he had so earnestly sought to destroy. The evil impulses were subdued, and he was left with a man whom he had so earnestly sought to destroy.

REFLECTIONS.—It is never wise to take advantage of an enemy, to seek to win him by what he is doing. It is the worst elements of our nature and that to which we are most prone to yield. It is the worst elements of our nature and that to which we are most prone to yield. It is the worst elements of our nature and that to which we are most prone to yield.

DR. STRANGE FOR BISHOP

He is Likely to Be Called to North Carolina

TO AID BISHOP WATSON

The Latter, an Aged and Feeble Man, Has Asked for an Assistant—Dr. Strange is Much Beloved

H. R.

From what can be gathered here concerning the matter, there appears a strong likelihood that the Rev. Robert Strange, D. D., rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of this city, will be asked to be called to Eastern North Carolina—Coadjutor of Eastern North Carolina—by a meeting of that diocese, which has been called for the early part of October.

Nothing positive can be stated, of course, but there is ever indication that the long-expected will happen, and the popular Richmond pastor will in this manner be called back to his old field of work, where he is so greatly beloved. For some time past his name has been connected with the bishopric of Eastern North Carolina, and to the inner circle of the church and to the clergyman generally that things were moving in this direction. But up to a week ago the present aged and feeble bishop of the diocese had asked for no assistant. Now he has done so, and a call has been issued for a special council to be held October 7th at Greensboro for the election of a coadjutor. It is generally believed that Dr. Strange will be chosen.

The Present Bishop. The bishopric is filled at the present time by the Right Rev. A. A. Watson, D. D., one of the oldest bishops in the church. He is, perhaps, more than 70 years of age, and is daily growing more feeble. At the present time the condition of his health is such that it is imperative that he be relieved of the strenuous duties of his office. Some time ago Bishop Gibson, of this diocese, went to North Carolina to help Bishop Watson out of the office. At that time it was evident that he could not much longer bear up under the strain.

The council met several months ago, and at that time it was thought by many that a coadjutor would be elected. Dr. Strange was prominently mentioned at that time, and rumors came into Richmond about midnight one day that he had already been elected. Dr. Strange himself was seen at that time, and he denied the report. It developed, however, that the rumor as to his election was incorrect. The council had not gone into the question of a coadjutor at all, and for the simple reason that it could not do so until the bishop asked it, and he did not then take that step.

A few days ago Bishop Watson made the formal request for a coadjutor, and a special council was at once called by the Standing Committee of the diocese. The notice has just been sent out. It is printed in the Southern Jurist, and the high character of the man who has been chosen is as follows: "Under the date of August 21st the bishop and Standing Committee of the Diocese of Eastern North Carolina instructed the secretary of the Diocesan Council to call a special council, to meet in St. Stephen's Church, Goldsboro, N. C., Wednesday, October 7th, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing a bishop-coadjutor and for consideration of questions germane to the same."

The notice is signed by the secretary of the council, and the high character of the man who has been chosen is as follows: "Under the date of August 21st the bishop and Standing Committee of the Diocese of Eastern North Carolina instructed the secretary of the Diocesan Council to call a special council, to meet in St. Stephen's Church, Goldsboro, N. C., Wednesday, October 7th, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing a bishop-coadjutor and for consideration of questions germane to the same."

The Standing Committee also passed a resolution expressing the great love and esteem in which Bishop Watson was held, and extending to him their personal sympathies in his hour of physical weakness.

Told St. Paul's They Would Do It. The announcement of the step taken by the bishop and the call for a special council has brought in in this city a prompt revival of the report that Dr. Strange will be the one selected for the important office. The general feeling seems to be that the choice will fall upon him.

Furthermore, it seems to be something more than a mere incidental report. Investigation yesterday developed the fact that when Dr. Strange was called to Richmond this very fact was laid before the vestry—that he would some day be made bishop of Eastern North Carolina and be taken away again. The church and the people, nevertheless, but it is a fact that even at that early date the people of the diocese had settled upon him as a successor to Bishop Watson. A prominent member of the vestry of St. Paul's was seen last night, and he admitted without hesitation that the rumors had been abroad for a very long time, and that there had been a recent revival of them.

"When we extended a call to Dr. Strange, he said, 'one of the obstacles between me and the bishopric is the Carolina people who want to keep him here. He is the statement that they would some day make him bishop and bring him back again. That was a remote sort of thing then, however, and we decided to call him anyway. We did so and he came. We waited some months, and then he was elected and that Dr. Strange would be chosen. But the matter was not gone into. A special Council has now been called, however, and the name of Dr. Strange is mentioned again. Of course, we have no way of knowing what will be the result. For myself, speaking personally, it would not surprise me in the slightest degree if his name came before the Council. If he received a large number of votes, and if he were elected coadjutor. Still, there is no telling what a delegate to the Council will do. I have no vote. I have no case where not a single vote was cast for the man who, it was generally conceded before the election would be chosen."

Much Liked Here.

Dr. Strange came to Richmond in the fall of the year 1891. In the course of his ministry here he has made many friends and admirers. He is much loved by his congregation, one of the strongest and most important in the State. For some time after he came, Dr. Strange was in ill health, but a recent extended trip abroad has done much to restore him, and he is now in the best of health. He has appeared particularly well. He is one of the few ministers to spend the hot month of August with his church in the city.

When he came to Richmond, Dr. Strange left what is generally understood to be the best church in the diocese of Eastern North Carolina. St. James, at Wilmington. His parishioners there and the people in the diocese generally simply idolized him, and they went through a long and losing fight to keep him. It was then that they declared that they would elect him bishop when the time came. The time has now come, and but few feel and doubt that the determination expressed then will be executed.

WASHINGTON.—Minister Squires at Havana has informed the State Department that Henry Shepherd, who was released by the Spanish government, is a resident of Cuba. He would have been released before when other American prisoners were liberated, but his citizenship was not then established.

The Tone of a Piano

Is not the only thing to be considered. The question is, "How long will it retain its tone?" The only way to decide this is to buy a piano that has an established reputation, and one that has been handled in your midst for a quarter of a century. We are to-day handling pianos that we have sold for nearly twenty-five years and have stood the test of time. You can refer you to these as monuments of the lasting qualities of our instruments. You cannot make a mistake in selecting from this list of high-grade Pianos:

FLIMFLAMMERS UNDER ARREST

Three Old-Timers Taken in Charge by Detective Gibson.

By some clever work Detective Gibson corralled a band of flimflammers, who have been preying upon the colored people, and has landed them in the Third Station.

They are Addie Johnson, Rosa Robinson and Berta Bailey, three negro women.

Their game was to go to a colored person with the story that a large sum of money had been left them, which they could not get at, because they lacked the necessary sum to secure a lawyer. In almost every instance the sympathizing friend or neighbor, would put up a sum of money, with the anticipation of a speedy return.

But the money was never returned, and the victims were left out. The two Mr. Gibson set out, and expects to have others. One of them is for $18, and the other is for $25.

The same party were arrested about two years ago on a similar charge, and each was sent to jail for a long term. One of them, Addie Johnson, was paroled at that time, because of bad health. The case will be heard by Justice Crutchfield this morning.

THE CUTTY'S ARE GREAT FAVORITES

The Six Musical Cutties, one of the most remarkable and talented musical organizations in the country, opened an engagement at the Casino last evening. The features were new and novel and were, at the same time, pleasing to the audience, winning many orders and much applause by the superb rendition of the various numbers.

The six performers continue to hold the crowds, the monologue of the "Green Gloves" entertainer, Jimmie Glenroy, causing many to hold their sides from laughing. The bill will be repeated this afternoon and to-night, special notices for to-day, and a regular matinee to-morrow with a closing performance at night.

Next week Manager McKee will present a new and up-to-date high standard of the attractions served the theatre-goers of the city.
